A Blood Work Social Story

Blood runs through your body. The heart pumps the blood to bring nutrients to your cells and to take waste out.

The blood carries information about your health. Sometimes a doctor will ask for "blood work" to find out more about your health.

Some blood is taken out of the body. A needle is used to take some blood out and put it in a tube.

The tube of blood is sent to a lab. The lab will check the blood. The information about your health will be sent back to the doctor.
